Risks associated with online trading

Utilising an Internet-based deal execution trading system carries risks, such as hardware, software, and Internet connection failures.

Due to our lack of control over signal power, reception, internet routing, equipment configuration, and connection reliability, we cannot assume responsibility for any communication failures, distortions, or delays that may occur during internet-based trading.

Our company utilises backup systems and contingency plans to mitigate the risk of system failure. Additionally, we offer the option of trading via telephone.

Investment with High Risk

Engaging in CFD and Options trading with margin involves significant risk and may not be appropriate for every investor. The considerable level of leverage can have both positive and negative effects. You must carefully consider your investment objectives, degree of experience, and risk tolerance before you trade leveraged products.

You should never invest money that you cannot afford to lose because there is a chance that you will lose all or part of your initial investment.

You should be aware of all the risks involved in trading on margin, and if you have any questions, you should consult an impartial financial advisor.

Every account is leveraged on margin. To keep their positions open, clients must keep enough margin. A margin call will occur if equity falls below 50% of the used margin. The investor has to keep their margin at a healthy level.
